

Security Tips

Leaving devices unlocked: Leaving your mobile device or computer unattended is yet another common mistake which most end users end up committing unintentionally. Using the [Windows key] + L will lock your computer immediately.

Password management: Even though longer passwords are a bit difficult to remember, their complexity and length make the task of cracking these passwords a lot difficult. As it is known to all, hacking the password of any account gives the hacker complete control over the account. It is advisable that no two accounts over the Internet should have same or even similar passwords. It is also a wise practice to change the passwords of all the accounts including the ones of the personal devices periodically and take care that the passwords are not repeated.

Beware of phishing websites and use internet cautiously: Always be aware of identity theft. Not always will hacker approach you or your system to get crucial data from you. Many times, it is just your personal information which they are interested in.
